

From Father Kirby...

October 18, 2020

Happy Sunday, Team Grace! This weekend is World Mission Sunday. It's a designation given by the universal Church to remind us all of our call to share the Gospel with others.

This weekend, Deacon Doc is preaching all the Masses. As someone who has served in over twenty mission trips, the Deacon is well equipped to preach this important observance. Thank you, Deacon!

Some things happening around the parish:

This weekend, the Bishop sent out a message reminding everyone that the Mass dispensation is still in effect; however, if someone is able to come to church (or do their regular duties in society), they should come and participate in Mass. This is a moral summons to all the faithful. God knows if this exhortation applies to you. Be sure to come to Mass, if you are able.

As the demands of schooling are placed on our young families, the effects have repercussions on our parish. One of these effects is the recent decision of Natalie Jackson to resign from our professional staff. Natalie will be staying home to give further attention to the needs of her family. While she will be missed on our staff, Natalie will still be volunteering periodically, and her family is still a member of our parish. We support Natalie, and assure her of our prayers!

Our weekend cleaning crews are in regular need of additional volunteers. Please consider being a part of one of our cleaning crews after the weekend Mass of your choice.

I want to remind everyone of our Saturday Healing Mass at 11:00 AM every weekend of October.

As a reminder, please be sure to only use the "charlestandioocese" email addresses for communication with the staff. All other email addresses have been discontinued. We don't want to miss any of your correspondences. Please be sure to use "charlestandioocese."

More updates next week! Oremus pro invicem (let's pray for one another)!
